

Could There Be Denials of Essential Christian Truths Within Contemporary Christianity?

Sixbert SANGWA • April 13, 2024

As we delicately navigate this complex subject, we do so with humility and a profound desire for understanding. The question we aim to explore is whether there could be denials of essential Christian truths within contemporary Christianity. This exploration intends to enhance education and stimulate thoughtful discussion, rather than provoke controversy. We ground our discussion on the bedrock of the Christian faith -- the Bible, which serves as the ultimate authority for Christians.

Prosperity Gospel and the Question of Wealth and Health

The Prosperity Gospel, a doctrine gaining substantial popularity within some circles of contemporary Christianity, insists that God invariably wills financial prosperity and physical health for His followers. This teaching seems to grapple with some of the core Christian truths.

Take, for instance, Jesus's teachings in Matthew 19:24. He says, "Again I tell you, it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for someone who is rich to enter the kingdom of God." This verse suggests that earthly wealth might pose a challenge to spiritual well-being, a notion that starkly contrasts the Prosperity Gospel.

Furthermore, the Prosperity Gospel seems incompatible with the experiences of deeply committed followers like Apostle Paul. Despite his fervent dedication to spreading the Christian gospel, Paul wrestled with physical ailments, as he explains in 2 Corinthians 12:7.

Oneness Pentecostalism and the Doctrine of the Trinity

Oneness Pentecostalism, a distinct branch of contemporary Christianity, challenges the traditional Christian belief in the Trinity. They argue that God is one Person who manifests Himself in three forms: Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. This theological position seems to contradict Matthew 28:19, where Jesus instructs His disciples to "Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit." This directive indicates a triune God, a concept that Oneness Pentecostalism seems to dispute.

Speaking in Tongues as Evidence of Salvation

Certain segments of contemporary Christianity emphasize the phenomenon of speaking in tongues, often equating it with proof of salvation. This belief appears to contradict Paul's rhetorical question in 1 Corinthians 12:30: "Do all speak in tongues?" The question implies that not every believer will manifest this spiritual gift. Additionally, this perspective seems to undermine the fundamental Christian teaching that salvation is a gift from God, conferred through grace and received through faith alone (Ephesians 2:8-9).

Conclusion

In concluding this examination, it's critical to note that not all Christian churches, including many within Pentecostalism, endorse the aforementioned teachings. In fact, there are some Christian communities that still uphold doctrines in line with traditional biblical teachings. This examination doesn't aim to vilify any Christian denomination. Instead, it seeks to unveil potential deviations from essential Christian truths within the contemporary Christianity. As believers, we're admonished to "test everything; hold fast what is good" (1 Thessalonians 5:21). With this in mind, we should continuously evaluate all teachings against the infallible Word of God, striving for unity in the essential truths of our faith.
